Patients with metabolic syndrome (MetS) are prone to develop osteoporosis. The aims of this study were to assess whether MetS is associated with osteoporosis and fracture risk in the general population. The sample consisted of 7,794 subjects (mean age 51.4 ± 13.5 years, 51.3% women) who participated in the CAO/ARAMIS cohort study. MetS was defined according to the NCEP ATP III criteria. Osteoporosis was defined as a T-score of -2.5 or lower at the lumbar spine and/or proximal femur. The presence of any fractures was recorded. The association between MetS and osteoporosis was evaluated with logistic regression and the association between MetS and fracture risk was estimated with Cox regression. In the unadjusted analysis, MetS was associated with osteoporosis (odds ratio [OR] 2.42; 95% confidence interval 82157476af
